

The requirement regarding broadcast flags protects copyright holders at the expense of consumers. It provides no protections for fair use rights and in fact, facilitates their effective repeal. As such, it benefits a tiny portion of the population at the expense of the vast majority. Fair use rights are as real and valid as copyright. I urge you to revise this to balance both sets of interests.